

Ascom Expands Military Communications Business

Highly-functional communication solutions for network-centric operations in defense and homeland security are available worldwide as Ascom focuses on international military business

In line with the growth strategy, Ascom is expanding its international military communications business. Subsidiary operations around the world have dedicated divisions with experienced staff to support the expansion. In other countries value added resellers with established governmental relationships have been contracted and trained. VAR companies interested in partnership possibilities are invited to contact Ascom at the address below.

Ascom is a Swiss communications company - that for more than 100 years has been known for unparalleled quality in communication solutions. These solutions now form the backbone of tactical communication infrastructures that deliver the highest standards of performance and reliability demanded by national and international military, peace-keeping and crisis management operations.

Ascom military products are built on proven capabilities deployed by several European national defense forces and peace-keeping operations in multi-national military environments.

The company's primary tactical communications offering composes a palette of IP access nodes that comply with military environmental specifications and are aligned with NATO TACOMS Post-2000 architecture for Wide Area Sub system; Local Area Sub-systems; and Mobile Sub-systems including Radio Access Points and Interoperability Points towards external public, strategic and legacy networks.
