The Ascom Myco 3 smartphone made a significant step forward. It has been listed on the Target Platform for the healthcare application Epic Rover.

The app gives clinical users of Epic's Electronic Health Records access to tools for clinical review, medication administration, specimen collection, and other clinical documentation workflows right from their mobile devices.

The Ascom Myco 3 smartphone works together with Ascom and third-party software and apps to put context-rich information from multiple sources into the hands of highly mobile clinicians. Designed for clinical and other demanding environments, the Ascom Myco 3 combines a robust yet ergonomic form with advanced integration capabilities and enterprise-grade security features.

Francis Schmeer, Chief Sales and Marketing Officer of Ascom, says: "This is yet another exciting step forward for the Ascom Myco 3 smartphone and the whole company. With this, our groundbreaking smartphone Ascom Myco 3 gains interoperability for clinicians. It clearly shows how Ascom's strategic approach in pushing software solutions for healthcare is bearing fruit."

Epic and Rover are registered trademarks of Epic Systems Corporation.
